YOU MUST SIGN THESE CODES & ETHICS - CODES OF CONDUCT (please print a copy for your own records)

Confidentiality:

*The practitioner must adhere to client confidentiality (keeping a client's secrets), unless a child is being seriously abused (such as sexually) or someone's life is in danger (for example, if the client said they intend to kill their spouse that night).

*Personal details such as phone numbers, email addresses and addresses of clients are privileged information may not be sold or given out to marketing companies.

*Any details of the treatment are also confidential, and written permission from the client is required before using the information in an article or case study.

*Client details need to be stored securely under lock and key. If these details are on a computer, they need to be accessed with an alphanumeric password, which must also be securely placed.

*Client details need to be stored for a minimum of 7 years, in case they are needed for legal reasons.

*The client's doctor may only be contacted with the client's written permission.

Competence:

*The practitioner must not practice in return for payment, or in a formal voluntary role (for example, working as a volunteer practitioner in a mental health or cancer charity), or in a free marketing or customer service role (for example, during a free talk) any modality in which they have not received formal training to practitioner level. If the practitioner wishes to practice without any financial or commercial reward a modality in which they have not received practitioner-level training, they must make it totally clear to their client that they do not have the appropriate training, be sure that they have permission from the client to do so, and must limit this practice to very close family and friends only. An exception to this is where the practitioner is doing a treatment under strict supervision, and according to the instruction of their trainer, whilst doing their professional-level training (for example, performing a Reiki case study as instructed by their Reiki Master).

*The Energy Healers Organisation reserves the right to approve or disapprove of professional-level training. This approval is subject to successful application from the practitioner and/or the training body.

Sessions:

*Sessions should take place in a safe and comfortable place.

Energy Healers Organisation, 3rd Floor, Commerce House, 55 Shortmarket Street, Cape Town, 8001, NPC Registration Number – 2011/138175/08, NPO Registration Number – 102-842-NPO, BPO930047036

*A client needs to be treated with the utmost respect and non-judgement: even if what they are saying goes contrary to the practitioner's way of thinking. The issues need to be worked through without prejudice.

*A Practitioner is in a position of trust and must never cross inappropriate boundaries. This includes the touching of private parts and requests to disrobe (unless it is part of, for example, an additional massage treatment the practitioner is additionally qualified to practice and the client has already requested and agreed to).

*Children may be seen with the parent's written permission. If the parents leave the child alone with the practitioner, it is recommended that the practitioner get an indemnity signed to cover for personal injury in cases where the child is a self-harming patient.

*Practitioners must never promise a cure for any problem.

*The doctor's care takes precedence over the complementary practitioners care and it must never be recommended that they leave this care. With energy healing, you are addressing the underlying energetic patterns with the goal of bringing balance and harmony within the energetic field of the person, when the body's energy field is balanced and flowing without disruption, the body can naturally heal itself. This does not replace medical care.

*There are instances where energy healing is not the most appropriate immediate or other action, particularly where the client is needing urgent hospitalization (medical emergency, such as heart attack), a danger to themselves (about to commit suicide), others (some extreme psychiatric cases). Here the nearest emergency room may be contacted or a crisis line may be phoned.

*Unless the practitioner is also a qualified nutritionist, dietician, or other suitably qualified medical practitioner, they may not prescribe supplements or advise on nutrition. They may, however, recommend one of these professionals in appropriate circumstances e.g. anorexia.

Pre-session agreement between the practitioner and client:

It is important to fully inform the client. They need to know about the possibility of the risk of an abreaction and allow them to have the opportunity to exit at this point and not have the treatment if that is their wish.

Upholding the Energy Healers Organisation:

There also needs to be the following agreement regarding the Energy Healers Organisation:

*To always represent the energy healing techniques approved by the Energy Healers Organisation and taught or trained by providers approved of by the Energy Healers Organisation.

*Not to take action that will be harmful or slanderous to the Energy Healers Organisation, any of its members or any of its approved healing methods. You should never bring the Organisation into disrepute.

*Should there be wrong-doing by a member of the Organisation, the procedure is that members of the public and members of the Organisation report it to the committee, who will then decide upon appropriate action, after due process of a disciplinary committee hearing which could also include a monetary penalty and/or expulsion from the Organisation.

Online, phone, and distant work:

*As part of the pre-treatment agreement, the practitioner will make the client aware of legal disclaimers. This is particularly pertinent when the session is conducted online via Skype or telephone.

*The practitioner and client must understand:

-the risks, benefits and alternatives to online, phone, and distant work, for example, differing laws across country or state borders.

-that every effort will be made to keep information confidential. However no internet or phone communication can be completely free from those that hack, but the practitioner undertakes to keep information secure on his/her side. The client needs to do the same.

-that the practitioner qualifications have been openly shared and that there is agreement to work together under this knowledge.

Disciplinary Procedures as per DISCIPLINARY-PROCEDURE document attached.

*Practitioners will follow and abide by any disciplinary decisions made by the committee of the Energy Healers Organisation, which may include expulsion.

*The main concerns in the rare occurrence of disciplinary action are to protect the public and uphold the reputation of the Organisation and all its members who abide by its Codes and Ethics.

I agree to the codes and ethics above and I agree that have I read them fully and understand them completely. This is in accordance with the laws of South Africa. I promise to abide by them and keep the integrity of the Organisation in mind at all times and act with integrity in line with the guiding principles within these rules and to protect the public & keep the public trust intact.
